

Three sock?

I'm working on two different pairs of socks right now: the blue and pink ones are my March sock club socks – which I think I've mentioned before – and the autumn coloured ones are for the Quarter Two Knit-a-long with the Socks that Rawk! group on Ravelry. I started the KAL socks in the Vancouver airport and mostly work on them after work while I wait for Rob. They travel around in my purse for those odd bits and pieces of time I find and despite being worked on frequently they go very slowly. The club socks I started a couple of weeks ago; they've only been worked on at home but every time I sit down with them I get so absorbed I find myself several inches ahead before it occurs to me to get up again. The KAL goes until the end of June so I've lots of time left for finishing those socks but it would be really nice to get my club socks done before my next package arrives. I've got about three weeks left. I think I might make it.