

I thought it was time for an update on my current sock. I got past the heel this afternoon and am now heading towards the toe. I should be wearing new socks next week.

I was trying to come up with some clever way of showing one finished and one getting-close-to-finished sock and decided to use the kitchen floor as my background. I don't know what made me think this was a good idea. Ollie was only a couple of feet away. As soon as I was getting things out she started getting excited.

String!

Wool!

Double Pointed Needles!!

I hit the shutter button a few times before saving my sock from wherever it was Ollie was planning to take it.