

I'm making my October sundress without mocking it out first.

I was going to do a mock-up but when I started working on it last night (yeah, I'm a little behind) I discovered I didn't have enough waste fabric to cut both of the back pieces. I'm working from a pattern in a Japanese craft book and I'm never certain of the fit. One good thing - this dress is going together quickly so if there's something wrong I should find out about it soon. But it's five o'clock on Hallowe'en now so I've set aside my sewing, put on my costume and I'm all ready to spend an evening next to the front door nibbling handing out candy.

I'm Taking Chances

Sunday, 31 October 2010 23:00

